ABOUT FOOD SCIENCE 2027

The International Congress on Advances in Food Science, Technology and Food Safety, branded as Food Science 2027, is set to take place from June 17 to 19, 2027, in the historic city of Rome, Italy, with a flexible hybrid format that welcomes both in-person delegates and online participants from across the globe. This premier food science conference brings together leading researchers, academicians, industry professionals, nutritionists, food technologists, regulatory experts, and students under one roof to exchange groundbreaking ideas and explore the latest innovations shaping the future of the food sector. By combining the charm of an iconic European destination with the accessibility of a virtual platform, the event offers a truly inclusive experience for everyone passionate about advancing food science worldwide.

Centered on the theme of progress and sustainability, Food Science 2027 covers a comprehensive range of topics including food technology, food microbiology, food safety and quality control, nutrition and dietetics, food processing and engineering, novel and functional foods, packaging innovations, food chemistry, and emerging trends such as plant-based alternatives, clean-label products, and smart food systems. Through keynote presentations, oral and poster sessions, interactive workshops, and panel discussions, attendees gain valuable insights into cutting-edge research, regulatory developments, and practical solutions to global challenges like food security, supply chain resilience, and consumer health.

One of the standout features of this international congress is the unmatched opportunity it provides for networking and collaboration. Delegates can connect with renowned speakers, forge partnerships with industry leaders, and engage with peers from diverse scientific and commercial backgrounds, opening doors to future research projects, academic collaborations, and business ventures. The hybrid model ensures that geographical and travel constraints never become a barrier, allowing participants to learn, share, and grow regardless of where they are located.

Whether you are presenting original research, seeking the latest advancements in food technology and safety, or simply expanding your professional horizons, Food Science 2027 in Rome promises an enriching and memorable experience. Mark your calendar for this must-attend food science and technology conference, and join a vibrant international community dedicated to building a safer, healthier, and more sustainable food future. Register early to secure your spot and be part of a landmark gathering that celebrates scientific excellence and innovation in the heart of Italy.
